

Supervisor Health And Safety Awareness

Course Overview:

This course provides supervisors with health and safety awareness training. Content includes information about the health and safety duties of employers, supervisors and workers, the rights of workers, and the recognition and control of workplace hazards.

Participant Profile

OHS Awareness Training is mandatory for all supervisors in Ontario. This course is appropriate for supervisors in all industries. Workers without supervisory duties should complete Worker Health and Safety Awareness which is also available through this online campus.

Learning Objectives:

Upon completion of the course, participants will know:

- The principle of the internal responsibility system
- The health and safety duties assigned to employers, supervisors, and workers under the law
- The legislated rights of workers
- The role of the joint health and safety committee or health and safety representative
- How to recognize, assess and control workplace hazards, and evaluate those controls
- Sources of assistance and information about health and safety matters
- The meaning of 'due diligence'

Evaluation Process:

This course includes mandatory testing to verify that participants understand course content. Participants must pass the test to complete the course. Those who do not pass must review content and re-test until a passing grade is obtained. Questions are randomly selected from a test bank to ensure that each testing experience is unique.

Employers should retain a record that each supervisor has completed health and safety awareness training. Upon successful completion of this course participants can download and print a Certificate of Completion which includes their name and the date of training.

Timeline For Completion:

Participants can begin the course immediately and can pause and resume training as needed. There are no time limits. Each person progresses at a pace that best matches their learning style and prior knowledge of course material. Most participants will complete the course in less than one hour.
